

HAL (Habitat for Humanity GB Asset Library) – terms and conditions of downloaded resources

All resources contained in HAL are the property of Habitat for Humanity unless specifically expressed otherwise and are available for use only to Habitat for Humanity staff and volunteers and their designates for Habitat for Humanity business purposes. Unless specified otherwise, Habitat for Humanity owns full and complete rights to these materials and grants their use for publication. However, Habitat for Humanity may revoke these rights at any time in writing, or verbally with written follow-up.

Use of these materials is intended for discussion of and presentation of the role and scope of Habitat for Humanity. They are intended only for use in discussion of or reference to the ideas, expressions or events of Habitat for Humanity and/or its affiliates. Any other use is a violation of the rights of Habitat for Humanity.

Resources may be cropped and sized to your specifications and altered in colour and density and filtration to suit your needs, however, their content may not be altered in any way without express, written permission from Habitat for Humanity.

How to Credit Images: When used in print, on the web or elsewhere, images and videos should be credited to the photographer and Habitat for Humanity (HFH). A proper sample photo credit would look like this: Kim MacDonald/Habitat for Humanity

It is our duty to respect the dignity of our homepartners and volunteers, whatever the situation.

Resources should be used in accordance with Habitat for Humanity's messaging guidelines.
